Book Riot's list of 2015 challenges includes everything from "A book written by someone when they were over 65" to a "guilty pleasure book" to a "self-improvement book" — whether or the book is traditionally considered to be a "self-improvement" book. A Year of YA Reading Challenge. If you're looking to try your hand at reading one book a day in 2015, I'm going to suggest that your best bet is probably to be reading YA. After all, YA novels are not only awesome , but also generally pretty easy to get through. But no matter how much YA you're looking to read — whether it's one book a day, one book a week, one a month, or even just one a season — the Year of Reading YA infographic from Epic Reads has you covered, telling you exactly what to pick up next. Check it out here.
