978-983-3782-54-3 (PB) $ 20.00

978-983-3782-55-0 (HB) $ 55.00

The Malaysian Indians comes at an important juncture in the history of this significant minority group in Malaysia. Written several years before the Hindraf rallies of 2007, this book is a much-needed introduction to the Indians of Malaysia.

It is a balanced, scholarly yet highly readable account of the origins, economic and political contributions, and continuing divisions and problems faced by this diverse community.

The focus is on those who migrated or were brought to work in colonial plantations and the civil service in the late 19th and early 20th century. Both the educated and poor labouring classes came to this nation seeking their fortunes, and became part and parcel of this growth, prosperity and political upheavals.

Singapore Eye Research Institute

$ 35.00

Just 10 years ago, ophthalmic research was almost unheard of in Singapore. With little money and no infrastructure, ophthalmologists and scientists expressed scant interest in research. Today, however, ophthalmic research in Singapore is at a high international level, as exemplified by the activities of the Singapore Eye Research Institute (SERI), which is capable of competing with and challenging the world's leading eye research centers. Indeed, the world-class research carried out at SERI has helped to extend Singapore's international reach as the country moves towards its goal of becoming a global city and a leading nation influencing developments across Asia and the world.

"This book is of historical importance. It describes the tensions created by a ruthless regime in a defenceless community, the feelings of helplessness as well as the resourcefulness of those who wanted to make a difference, and then had to escape under life-threatening conditions. No one at the time knew whether the tiny pinpricks of the protesters would help at all to bring about any change in a seemingly perpetual situation and whether the monolithic autocrats could maintain their communist rule forever. Indeed, only few could surmise that less than two decades would be needed to bring the old war to an end. What happened should not be forgotten. Personal accounts such as the one here are real jewels."

This book deals with Singapore's transition from a British Crown Colony to a state in the Federation of Malaysia, and expulsion from the Federation to become a separate independent nation. For the leaders of Singapore's PAP Government, Malaysia was a traumatic experience. Yet, but for it, they might never have found the resolve and the secret of building this extraordinary nation, this nation based on Singapore alone that they and an entire generation had once believed an impossibility. This story of nation-building deals with topics on national (army) service, economic development, education in schools and in universities, housing and home ownership. It deals also with issues of ethnicity and national identity in the context of challenges from within and without, in the latter case from globalization and global Islamism.

Papa As a Little Boy Named Ah Khoon / Andrew Tan Chee Khoon

Singapore: Ring of Light Publishers, 2007

155p,; 20cm

ISBN: 9789810583293

$ 11.00

Decapitating prisoners, forcing water into their bodies and then stomping on them and smacking them violently for not bowing – these are the various brutalities and more that people in Singapore experienced during the Japanese Occupation.

Here, that dark period of the nation's history is told through the eyes of a little child, Ah Koon who lived in a Geylang Kampong during the '40s and '50s.

Author Andrew Tan Chee Khoon, who was little Ah Koon, faced the grim uncertainty of the war years together with all children of the generation. Yet life was full of adventures and discovery – fishing in ponds, catching spiders, playing simple games, going to the village cinema, and even getting up to mischief-experiences that are missing from the urban life of today's kids.

This book presents a genealogy of the social networks and power struggles of the major influential group of Indonesian-educated Muslims called "intelligentsia". In this effort, the longue duree approach is combined with an interactive, inter-disciplinary and inter-textual method to better understand the various underlying impulses and interactions contributing to continuity and change in the long-term development of the Muslim intelligentsia and its relation to power. In doing so, this book provides a major and important contribution to the study of the social history of contemporary Indonesia a plausible claim to being the first of its kind.

The book of Mevlana has been prepared on the occasion of the 300th anniversary of Mevlana's birth; it is intended to offer readers drops taken from Mevlana's sea of the heart, which he describes as "as a boundless and infinite sea that it is like an ocean." In the first part of the book, we have included articles that will guide those who want to make a journey through this ocean. In these articles, except for some technical issues, the preferences of the authors in manners of style have been observed.

Mevlana states that he dedicated his life to cultivating roses in the hearts of people. "The heart is a hidden garden, its trees are hidden. They appear with a hundred forms, but they have only one true form." The roses of "unity" and "love" that are tended by Mevlana are still fresh, despite the many centuries that have past since he lived. And the drops scattered from his bundles sea continue to quench those who have a thirst.

Istanbul: Turkiye Is Bankasi Kultur Yayinlari, 2007

485p,; 31cm

ISBN: 9789944882170

This book is the product of Haluk Oral's passionate quest of some twenty years, during which he fastidiously collected the documents, object and recollections you will read about herein. It is not a typical study of war history. At the heart of his work are the 'human landscapes' of the Battle of Anburnu, one of the most critical clashes of the Gallipoli Campaign. The author traces the stories of the people of both sides, shaped as they were on the thin line dividing life and death, there on that narrow coastal strip.

A bloodstained map, a flask inscribed with its owner's name, purchased from an antique shop and an order handwritten by Mustafa Kemal are just a few of the objects that serve as the points of departure for the stories in this book, which proves the significance of not only the written word but of visuality in reimagining history, provide us with important clues to the past. With its 'micro' history approach, this volume deftly reveals aspects of history that are hidden in the details and thus so often overlooked by 'macro' history.

1. Papermaking – History. 2. Paper – History. 1. Title
$ 50.00

Paper technology originated in China some two millennia ago, from where it spread east, to Korea and Japan, and west, along the Silk Road, to Central Asia, eventually reaching Europe in the 13th century. As the technology propagated, paper effected profound changes in each society it touched, becoming one of the most important of all cultural media, a status that it retains to the present.

Paper accrues value as religious and symbolic markings are added to its surface; fortune papers transport messages to the gods, paper is given the value of money in the form of banknotes, and the dream of flying was first realised in hot-air balloons made of paper. Paper can even be employed as architectural elements, as textiles for garments, and as a medium for artistic expression. In one or many of these manifestations, paper effects the lives of all on earth today.

In this cultural history of paper, acclaimed paper artist Therese Weber travels to the few remaining places where traditional methods of papermaking have been preserved. Commencing there Weber takes the reader on a fascinating and colourful journey of discovery of a commodity that many may take for granted, but few fully understand.

A Biography of King Naresuan the Great / H. R. H. Prince Damrong Rajanubhab
Samutprakan: Toyota Thailand Foundation, 2008
213p,; 24cm
ISBN-13: 9789740697169
$ 35.00

For much of his long and scholarly career as a historian, Prince Damrong was intrigued by the life of Naresuan. This northern prince led the Thai armed forces during a turbulent period in the late sixteenth century, succeeded to the throne of Ayutthaya and is portrayed as the greatest of Thai kings. The author begins the biography with a brief description of his subject's family and then turns to the first but unsuccessful Burmese attempt to conquer the kingdom in 1949. He continues quickly through the second and third invasions from Burma in the 1960s, which brought the Thai under Burmese control. The greater part of the book concentrates on the hard-fought restoration of independence, beginning in the mid-1580s, and the ensuing struggle to secure the kingdom against further foreign aggression.

[The establishment of Monarchy on the thirteenth day of the eleventh month of the Earth Monkey year is a high point that changed the history of Druk Yul forever. It marked the end of a political structure that began in the 17th century and the beginning of a Monarchical system of governance. A hundred years later, four successive hereditary monarchs have steered Druk Yul into the 21st century as a sovereign, stable and modernizing state while ensuring that her natural and cultural heritage remained intact.]

[This book presents a systematic overview of the official military, police, and civilian awards of the Republic of India from 1947 through to the present day. In addition to presenting a detailed catalogue of official awards, this work also surveys the development of policy on such awards, considers their changing legal status, and provides a critique of the policies that governed their creation and bestowal. While focusing on official national awards, the book also provides information on Indian provincial awards of the pre-1947 Provisional Government of Free India. While much space is necessarily devoted to military awards, attention is also given to civilian awards, to the awards of the police and fire services and to the other official awards of the Indian Republic.]

[Since Independence the princes and regional rulers of India have mostly been seen as anachronistic figures, too closely associated with the former colonial government, and often a byword for extravagance, sybaritic lifestyles, and mild despotism. When they were stripped of their privy purses by Indira Gandhi in 1971, there were more protests in Britain than in India. No serious efforts have been made to put these men, and a few women, in a pictorial context, to analyse the differing styled of portraiture favoured by them, and the motives behind the pictures. Portraits in Princely India examines the rulers at war, at play, in the durbar, visiting shrines, temples, and mosques, and receiving ambassadors.]
