Francis Thompson. From Wikiquote. Jump to navigation Jump to search.Â you are under sentence of life, nor petition that it be commuted into death. Shelley. In the Dublin Review (July 1908). Summer set lip to earth's bosom bare; And left the flushed print in a poppy there: Like a yawn of fire from the grass it came, And the fanning wind puffed it to flapping flame. The Poppy. The Hound of Heaven (1893)[edit].Â Upon thy so sore loss Shall shine the traffic of Jacobâ€™s ladder Pitched betwixt Heaven and Charing Cross. St. 5. External links[edit]. Wikipedia has an article about: Francis Thompson. Wikisource has original works written by or about: Francis Thompson. Works by Francis Thompson at Project Gutenberg. These compositions he sent, giving Charing Cross Post Office as his address, to Merry England, where the work of his uncle, Edward Healy Thompson, had already appeared. They were accepted by the editor, Wilfrid Meynell, and were duly published in the numbers for April, May, and June respectively.Â There were published posthumously the Life of St. Ignatius Loyola (1909), The Life of John Baptist de la Galle (1911), and the Essay on Shelley (1909), with a preface by Mr. George Wyndham, who pronounced it "the most important contribution to pure letters written in English during the last twenty years." [2].Â Richard Burton reads the haunting poem 'The hound of Heaven' by Francis Thompson. The Kingdom of God. See also Edit. Francis Thompson (1859-1907), Catholic poet and inspirational writer, wrote not for his own time but for future generations. This bio-graphical reappraisal--based on his private notebooks and widespread new manuscript evidence--assesses his life and the continuing relevance of the work of a poet whose best-known piece, The Hound Of Heaven, is a landmark in modern English r Francis Thompson (1859-1907), Catholic poet and inspirational writer, wrote not for his own time. but for future generations.Â To ask other readers questions about Between Heaven and Charing Cross, please sign up.
